The Village Voice's Choice Eats

The Village Voice's Choice Eats

Robert Sietsema, the grand daddy of ethnic eating in NYC and columnist for the Village Voice's Counter Culture has a tongue that has navigated the most obscure culinary corners of the city. In an homage to Sietsema's eclectic restaurant research, the Voice is holding Choice Eats, its first tasting event for fearless eaters. For the price of cab fare to Queens you can sample foods from such famed eateries as Yeti of Hieizan, Kampuchea Restaurant, Krik Krak, and Bajan Café. To make the event even more appetizing, the Voice will contribute a slice of ticket sales to benefit high-school students at the Academy of Hospitality & Tourism at Erasmus interested in studying regional cuisine.
